Program Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this degree from KSU, students will be able to:

1. Understand the intersection between culture, language, and learning and how cultural identity affects learning by applying knowledge of culturally and linguistically sustaining pedagogy in planning and implementing lessons for B-12 English learner students.
2. Understand the central theories of first and second language acquisition/learning, as well as the individual, social, cultural, and political factors that affect this process in a classroom-based setting.
3. Use language proficiency assessments in Georgia and the WIDA English language development standards in lesson planning.
4. Design a lesson plan to teach standards-based content and language, implement strategies that scaffold and differentiate the lesson, and assess student learning effectively.
