Program Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this degree from KSU, students will be able to:

1. Demonstrate an understanding of urban education as situated in historical, social, political, and economic contexts.
2. Describe the impacts of urban education on students and families in urban classrooms and schools and apply this knowledge to practices in school and classroom environments.
3. Explain and critically analyze the impact of systems, structures, policy, and law on urban education schools and classrooms and apply this understanding to their instructional practices.
4. Critically analyze their experiences, beliefs, and cultural perspectives to determine the impact on their teaching practice and work in urban education contexts, including working with families.
5. Develop goals and actionable plans for advocacy efforts within urban education contexts that draw upon their knowledge of urban education, culturally responsive and sustaining practices, current research trends, and varying funds of knowledge within their contexts and communities.
